LITERACY & POLITICS

Dr. Judith Lin // 7:00 PM
How literacy impacts civic engagement — why literacy should be a right, not a privilege.

We define literacy as the "ability to identify, understand, interpret, create, communicate and compute, using printed and written materials associated with varying contexts". These skills are required, especially in this age of information, to navigate the social, political, and economical complexities of the world. Yet, there are a great deal of our own citizens who have been systematically limited from opportunities to gain these skills. This lecture series aims to open conversations and awareness about these disparities.
